In 1974, Jeff Brougher pioneered a new concept in the insurance industry: self-funded benefit plans for small to medium-sized businesses. Until then, only large corporations were able to afford the staff it took to maintain a self-funded plan. Utilizing the provisions of ERISA, Mr. Brougher created innovative, flexible stop loss insurance products to help small business enjoy the benefits of self-funding while controlling their risk exposure.

MAKING HISTORY

Throughout the next decade, Brougher's company was widely recognized for its industry leadership, as it became the largest managing general underwriter of stop loss insurance in the U.S. for several years. The company provided employers with as few as 11 employees with the cost savings and plan control offered by self-funding.
